RedWind Group and SBA presents the Tribal Self Assessment Tool Demonstration Program for Economic Development

DATE: OCTOBER 23, 2009

RedWind is pleased to offer a comprehensive “Tribal Self Assessment Tool Demonstration” training program to help Native communities identify and assess the unique tribal culture, vision, infrastructure, natural resources and human capital that can contribute to sustainable economic development.

Results from the first five TSAT Tribal Self Assessment Tool Demonstration Programs

- "(With this tool) tribes can own their own economic development processes." Tribal Council
- "This tool helps you know where you are, so that when projects come along you recognize the risk and build in mechanisms to mitigate that risk." Tribal Planner
- "If I had this roadmap years ago, we would have had many fewer problems developing a master plan." Development Corporation General Manager
- "The TSAT is a self-help tool that will help us move forward." Vice Chairman
- "This is different from all the other programs we've seen over the years." Tribal Council

The Small Business Administration (SBA) is sponsoring eight (8) training sessions throughout Indian Country. This is a no fee, three-day TSAT Workshop / Training Session. Participants are responsible for only their own transportation, meals and lodging.

Who should take this course?

The TSAT Training Sessions are specifically designed for tribal leadership. Economic and Community Development leaders within each tribe are especially encouraged to attend. Seating is limited to two representatives per tribal entity.

What participants will gain

This workshop will provide the skills, knowledge, and expertise necessary to help assess your economic development environment.

When and Where

RedWind has completed training in five locations. Only three training sessions remain.
